

PROMPTS

PLOT AND CHARACTER

1. Think of the best day that you can imagine. What would happen? How would it unfold? As you're reaching the very best part, suddenly think of something that can immediately turn it into the worst day ever. Put this into words!
2. Make a list of things about a character: their age, hobbies, occupation, and other details you can think of. Write about a day in their life. Then, write about a day in a life one more time, but for a character who is the complete opposite of the character you've just created.

These are just exercises to get you started with developing plot and character. What you decide to create for your own fiction story is completely up to you.
